

The Sensitive Man

by Poul William Anderson (1926 - 2001)

Poul Anderson delves into the realm of human potential in this exciting story and asks some penetrating questions for us to think about. What if psychology finally enabled people to even partially control all those automatic reactions of our minds and bodies? What if we were not slaves to anger, fear, emotions, hormones, blood pressure and the thousand other things that our bodies 'take care of' from instant to instant? What if those things could be brought under the control even partially of our reason and minds? In this story one man stood between a power-hungry cabal and their world mastery—but a man of, shall we say, unusual talents.

Read by Phil Chenevert. Total running time: 02:38:02

This recording is in the public domain and may be reproduced, distributed, or modified without permission. For more information or to volunteer, visit librivox.org. Cover picture incorporates works published in 1892 by John Gray McKendrick (d. 1906). Copyright expired in U.S., Canada, EU. and all countries with author's life +70 yrs laws. Cover design by gargarrick. This design is in the public domain.